Hi, my name is _____ and I am a student at _____ University. I just wanted to share a blog post that would help people with accessibility on their computers. I have been working on this for some time now and it is finally ready to be released. The premise of the blog post is about how to get accessibility for your computer so you can get around easier on it due to physical or other disabilities. There are many techniques, from using screen readers so you can read what's on the screen to using voice synthesizers so you can talk back with your computer. This blog post will explain those techniques, as well as some other things that I have found useful. I also have a list of websites to download programs from if you need a program to help you with your computer accessibility. If you have a specific disability, please let me know what it is and how it affects your computer use because I can tailor this blog post specifically to your situation. If your disability isn't listed, please feel free to contribute to the list. I hope the blog post is useful to you and I look forward to any comments left.
